Chief of the Council of Russian Emigrants in France.

Subject was born June 20, 1908 at Novotcherkassk, Russia. Was a dancer in a company of Russian ballet in France and South America. He settled in Germany in 1931 and in 1932 acquired German citizenship. Enlisted in National-Socialist party, took propaganda course and became a member of the SS. From spring of 1941 until liberation of Paris was in France as a member of the "Russische Abteilung" of the Gestapo. Founded with Col. MODRACH (qv) a "Direction of Affairs of Russian Emigrants in France". Took over the office of the Russian Emigrants in Paris and had its president, Basil MAKHLAKOFF and his assistant JOUKOVSKY (qqv) arrested. Subject carried on anti-Soviet, British, American and Jewish propaganda and assisted the Gestapo in recruiting Russian emigrants for the German Army. Subject is now reported to be working with UNRRA at Passang near Munchen in Am. Zone of Occupation under protection of US Army.

"GRALIN", stage name used 1930-35; Georg WOLKOW, alias used since Jan. 46  IZTS-2367 because of fear of location and delivery to Soviets. When in Berlin, stayed with his cousin Nina MELHOSE. In 1939 became interested in politics; took short course in political science at Berlin University; became associated with Dr. HENGELHAUPT (qv) of RSHA. Worked closely with the VLASSOV movement till Feb. 45. Tried to flee to Spain; did not succeed. Finally settled in Munich where he is now. Subject claims he was working for anti-communist Russia, not Germany.

When the German entered Paris, the German authorities created a census bureau, where all White Russians, non-Jewish, or non-Communist, were required to register. This census bureau was directed by Subj., nephew of the famous Gen. KRASNOFF, the cossack Ataman. During the period of the Germ. occupation White Russians had to have a card signed by this bureau, as well as other identity papers, to protect them from arrest. Thus, this census bureau has a complete list of all White Russians in France, now about twenty thousand. The bureau was located at 4 Rue Galliera, and a sub-office at 40 Rue St. Didier, Paris, and now occupied by a so-called Committee of Russian Patriots, alleged to be Communists.

Source of document on "Russian Emigration and Its Cooperation with the Germans Against the Soviets". Was head of Russian Emig. Office in Paris, working on behalf of Germans to neutralize Soviet use of Russian Emig. groups as secret service. Subj came from theatrical background - grandfather was adj.-gen. to last czar. His personal goal in above office was (1) to assist the Russian Colony; (2) free it from Soviet influence and penetration; (3) collect and unify all Russian National forces for fight vs Soviets. Lost his position in 7/43 and left Paris on 8-17-44 for Berlin where he threw himself whole-heartedly into the work for Gen. VLASSOV.

Request that subject be queried concerning his last contacts with MODRACH, Vladimir C. (qv).

Subject says he first met General TURMUL in early Fall, 1944, and was instrumental in getting VLASSOV to accept TURMUL as a member of the R.N.R. Subject does not believe TURMUL is a Soviet agent, altho he considers that the Soviets may have infiltrated his entourage in view of TURMUL. See document for details of subject's relations with TURMUL, of which subject is source.

See document for personal description of subject, a stateless White Russian from Yugoslavia. In the autumn of 1945 WYLMAR (qv) met subject in Munich, and he told her he was in hiding. Later subject stated that he had secured permission to stay in Munich on basis of paper certifying he had a job, presumably for the director of a ballet school. In Spring 1946, WYLMAR heard that subject had left Munich for some place in the Bavarian country, and that he is now known under an alias.
